Animal Story

WILLIAM FEATHER, writing in the October issue of the Imperial Type Metal magazine, tells this animal story.

Mr. Feather speaking—
We stopped overnight at a farm house, on a motoring trip, and rose early to watch the rising sun and nature starting a busy day.

Out in the barnyard, a he-raccoon had been coming over a fence and milking the cow, the farmer told us. Any-way, this morning, a porridge saucer of thick cream had been left for him.

From within a shed we watched the coon sample the cream. Several times he stopped lapping, went to the fence and evidently was urging his wife, on the far side, to join him. But she only backed away, obviously afraid.

Finally the he-raccoon finished the cream, except for a thick margin-cream. He took the dish between his teeth, carried it to the fence, and tried to shove it through a gap in the boards that his mate might enjoy what was left.

The opening was too narrow. After numerous trials he put the saucer on the ground, and for several minutes contemplated it. At the opening, Mr. Feather said, and somehow we had the feeling that she was confident he would solve the problem.

He did, too, presently. He picked up the dish and turned it sideways, so that it passed through. He enjoyed the remnants.

It seemed a surprising demonstration of animal intelligence. There was more than instinct involved, as in the case of the chimpanzee in a New York zoo that loosened its iron trapeze and used it as a crowbar to bend the cage bars apart in an attempt to escape.

Indians say that wild ducks have mentality to the point of a language; that if you shoot the leader they will descend into a marsh and, after much quacking, elect a new leader and resume their flight. It's interesting, if true.

Religious Census Plans Mapped for Canvass Sunday

Every White Home in City to Be Checked by Church Workers

COOPERATION URGED

Name and Address Will Asked of Individuals by Committees

Plans continue to go forward for the religious census of the city of Hope next Sunday afternoon.

More workers were enlisted Wednesday night at the mid-week services of the participating churches. All workers will meet Thursday night at the First Baptist church auditorium at 7:45 except the members of the Garrett Memorial Baptist church who will meet in their auditorium at 8:45 for final instruction concerning the work and assignment of territory.

All the city has been mapped and charted for the census workers by a committee consisting of A. C. Erwin, Mrs. A. C. Kolb and Miss Jean Lassiter.

Information concerning every white resident of the city will be taken for tabulation and use by the churches according to the membership or the preference of the individuals. The information to be secured Sunday afternoon will include such matters as: name, address, age, church membership, Christian profession, and Sunday school attendance.

Asks For Cooperation
The pastors of the churches urge the people of Hope to co-operate by seeing to it that at least one member of the family who can give the information remain at home until the census takers have visited them on Sunday afternoon. The plan upon which they are working should enable all workers to have completed their work by 2:30 or 3 o'clock. Homes in which no one is found on Sunday will have to be revisited early next week in order that a complete tabulation may be had.

The churches are giving their matter their earnest attention, their members rendering the service for which this effort calls, because they have a sense of the importance for the individuals and for the community of the spiritual values which they are set to proclaim.

They seek to present the claims of Christ upon men and women with a conviction that it is by these claims that happiness is to be attained and civilization is to be maintained.

Secretary Goes on Trial for Murder

Pretty Margaret Drennan Tells of Shooting Paul Reeves

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.—(AP)—With her voice breaking at times and her eyes filling with tears, pretty Margaret Drennan told a jury trying her for murder Thursday that she took a revolver with her on a rendezvous with Paul Reeves to prevent a repetition of an earlier attack upon her.

As Reeves' widow watched intently from a spectator's seat directly in front of the witness stand, the 20-year-old secretarial school student declared that Reeves, a father of two children, assaulted her first in his car the night of August 7.

She learned that same night for the first time, she said, that he was married and was a father.

A month later, she testified, she agreed to meet Reeves at his bungalow when his wife was away to tell him she believed she was pregnant.

She testified that when she arrived the lights went out. Reeves called her, she said. She then said that Reeves was nude.

"It was awful," she said.

Pledges Co-operation to Miller—Another Seeks Miller's Seat

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Governor Bailey said in a formal statement Thursday that he attributed his defeat in Monday's special election to his nomination by the State Democratic Committee.

He held out the olive-branch to his opponents in the contest, and addressed to Senator-Elect John E. Miller a pledge of co-operation "in any effort he may make to serve the best interests of our state."

"My defeat, I am moved to believe, is attributable not so much to errors as to the people's opposition to that long-established custom and established practice under which I was nominated," said the governor.

"Some of our most illustrious Arkansans were thus nominated. I hold neither bitterness, hatred nor malice toward anyone."

Seeks Miller's Seat
WALNUT RIDGE, Ark.—(AP)—Roy Richardson, lawyer, former state senator and prosecuting attorney, announced Thursday his candidacy for the Second District Congressional seat.

The office is to be vacated by November 15 by Representative John E. Miller who was elected to the United States senate seat in Monday's special general election.

Training Courses at Baptist Church

Five-Day Session Will Be Held at the Church Next Week

The officers and teachers of the First Baptist Sunday School completed plans Wednesday night for a five-day training course for all Sunday school and church workers.

They announced that seven out-of-town faculty members have been secured to teach that number of classes. These classes will meet in the Educational building of the church each night next week, Monday through Friday, from 7 to 8:55.

One hundred and fifty Sunday school and church officers and teachers, prospective officers and teachers, and church members are expected to attend each night of the training school. Officers or workers from other churches of the city are invited to enroll to the whole week or attend individual sessions of the school. There will be no tuition charge for anyone.

A nursery will be in charge of qualified attendants each night for children of pre-school age. A supervised study hall will be provided for school children in order that they may come with their parents and study their lessons as the would if they had remained at home.

These children will be dismissed from the study hall to attend a feature and inspirational period each night of the school.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—(AP)—Police of Rhode Island Thursday sought two men who apparently attempted to kidnap the year and a half old son of Secretary of State Louis Cappelletti, and then escaped in a green sedan after falling to the back yard of the Cappelletti home, asked the nurse-maid where the boy was, and then drove away after searching the baby's carriage. The boy, John, had been taken in another carriage for a stroll before the men came.

Gijon on Fire, and Surrender Looms

Nothing Can Stop Rebels' Planes, Say Government Refugees

BIARRITZ, France.—(AP)—A group of Spanish government fliers who fled from Gijon Wednesday, said the city was in flames and further defense against General Franco's army appeared impossible.

Another was spreading, they said, with Basques and Asturians fighting each other in the streets. Food supplies were nearly exhausted, and only a few militiamen still were ready to hold out against the insurgents.

The government fliers, who said they were the last of Gijon's air force, sought refuge in France with their six planes.

"There are no more planes in Gijon," one officer said. "Against Franco's aviation no defense is possible. Bombs rain on the air field. There is no more ammunition for the anti-aircraft guns."

CHAPTER I

"Silly of me not to have cabled," Jill Wentworth decided.

It was one of a gay crowd that had surged down the gangplank, onto the docks, and out into the sunshine—a crossing from Europe just behind.

During the year of study and travel she had not felt even a little twinge of nostalgia, she thought. And now, here on home soil, she was definitely, terribly homesick. In all the big crowd milling about her—kissing, patting, shaking hands or rapturously hugging—there was not one welcome for her.

In the jumble of travel impedimenta, Jill saw her own smart luggage rubbing noses with several shabby bags, which bore, nevertheless, as many foreign stamps as her own.

Not far away the owner of these was arguing with a porter. The young man appeared much concerned about one very large and battered case. There was a belligerent squaring of his shoulders. And then Jill gasped. The young man turned. It couldn't be. But it was, the same young artist who had persisted in cropping up in her pathway over all Europe.

But how had he reached the United States at the very moment of her own arrival? He couldn't have come over on the same ship. If he had, she couldn't have missed him.

The young artist was standing beside her with his hat off, the wind ruffling his wavy, light brown hair.

"I'm sorry, but isn't this your bag, also?" he queried, "how?"

The young man smiled a little. "I didn't have a very discriminating red cap. He should have realized that a smart suitcase didn't match the rest of my luggage. I assure you that I don't as a rule, go about grabbing off other people's things."

The smile revealed even white teeth and brought a humorous light to his eyes. He was much nicer in this mood, Jill decided. Every time she had seen him in Europe, he had seemed in a perfect frenzy.

She had decided that he had painted all Europe. It had been ridiculous—running into him in three widely separated places. And she had never forgiven him for not really seeing her any of those times.

Courting Contentment, Man Is Too Often Seeking Miracles

Power of Auto-Suggestion Preached by Little Frenchman

HE DIES FORGOTTEN

Prophets of Happiness Find People Expect Far Too Much

This is the second of five stories on the diverse roads down which millions are drawn in today's frantic pursuit of happiness.

By WILLIS THORNTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

Grandpa sneaked off to a phrenologist when he wanted to know whether he wouldn't do well to get out of the hay and feed business and try something that suited him better.

But phrenology gradually lost its popularity, and for modern times of seeking happiness largely took its place. Even these have come and gone in wave after wave of popularity and abandonment.

Who remembers Coue today? Few indeed, and yet the kindly face of the little Nancy druggist and his refrain, "Every day, in every way, I am getting better and better," swept the country in 1923.

The world was hungry then for someone who could give it peace, and a sense of power over mental and physical suffering. There had been so much of that in the preceding years. There came word of this little gray Frenchman who healed his neighbors and customers, and brought them mastery over their ill of body and mind, brought them happiness and peace.

To England first went Coue to lecture and expound his method. There with the aid of the American-born Lady Beatty, he established a reputation and a clinic.

Soon an American tour was announced. Preceded by a tremendous public fanfare, Coue arrived, modest, claiming nothing but to be able to help his patients to help themselves by auto-suggestion.

But the public wanted miracles. The lame, the crippled, the stuttering, the epileptic flocked to his meetings, and heard the quiet, confident voice saying, "ce passe, ce passe." ("It is passing, it is passing.") The public was divided, many were skeptical, but for months nothing was heard but the "better and better" philosophy.

That many were helped is beyond question. Mary Garden testified to the benefits of the Coue system, and many of the distraught and unhappy people who went to Coue for help, actually found themselves "getting better and better" as a result.

Coue Dies Forgotten

But there was a reaction, led by those who had expected miracles, and by more orthodox psychologists. Coueism was dropped almost as sharply as it had been taken up.

Kroger Opening in a New Store Here

Formal Opening at 215 South Main Street on This Friday

Kroger Grocery & Baking Co., which has dropped the Piggly Wiggly franchise and is operating under its own name, will hold a formal opening of its new Hope store Friday at 215 South Main street, one door south of its old location.

The Kroger company has spent $5,800 in new fixtures, not counting the extension and remodeling of the old Merritt store location by the building owner when Kroger negotiated its lease. The building was enlarged by 120 square feet.

Kroger has installed a new 28-foot meat counter, and has increased its stock of goods by $1,000.

There will be gifts to customers at the store opening Friday and Saturday.

Attendance Held Down Because of Threatening Rain

Merchants & Farmers Fair Will Continue for Three Days

PARADE ON FRIDAY

Various Events Promise Thrills and Entertainment for Visitors

Overcast skies which threatened to loosen rain, held down attendance Thursday at the opening of the Southwest Arkansas Merchants & Farmers Fair, a community project sponsored by Hope Chamber of Commerce and supported by merchants of this city.

The fair will continue for three days and nights.

Captain Happy Harris, fair manager, said that visitors started arriving at daylight Thursday and were coming in greater numbers at noon. The exhibit hall at the fair grounds is filled with farm products and displays of articles.

Much livestock had been moved on the grounds at noon. The fair management will continue to receive livestock until noon Friday. The exhibition of poultry grew larger than expectations, forcing carpenters to build additional coops.

Welcome Address

Mayor Albert Graves was scheduled to deliver the welcome address to visitors early Thursday afternoon, and was to be followed by an address, by Captain Harris, fair manager, who was to review the fair program and explain various contests that are to be conducted.

The M. V. Whitten-wildwest rodeo, featuring Montana and Idaho bucking horses and Brama steers, arrived and will give performances inside the baseball park twice daily during the three days of the fair.

Performances are to be given each afternoon and night. Roping bull-dogging, trick and fancy riding and many other stunts are planned. The rodeo will feature Flying Cloud, Jr., son of the late Yakai Indian chief.

Other riders and ropers as Shorty Norwood of Ashfork, Ariz., Cy Johnson of Idabel, Okla., Rabbit Lindsey of Hugo, Okla., and Red Henry of Wichita Falls, Texas.

Arena announcers are Melvin Hudson of Clarksville, Texas and M. N. Whitten, manager of the rodeo.

Airplanes Arrive

Five airplanes for the aerial show to be staged Sunday, arrived during the morning, but due to threatening rain were ordered to hangars in Texarkana where they will await until called to return, possibly Friday.

Events on the race track were scheduled Thursday afternoon, in addition to various contests and free aerial acts featuring Harry Froboes, doing death-defying stunts on the top of an 85-foot pole. All of his stunts are performed without a net. He will give two performances daily.

Mrs. Clyde Monte, in charge of Troop No. 1 of Hope Girl Scouts, announced Thursday that the troop would take care of babies and children up to three years old all day Saturday and up to 10 p. m. that night as a free service to the community mothers and fathers.

Mrs. Monte urged parents to bring their children to the Boy Scout cabin on the fair grounds, and the girl scouts will take charge of them. Parcels will be checked at the Scout cabin for one nickel. You may guard

Showing Youth That Crime Doesn't Pay

IF YOU should see a policeman in uniform neglecting his beat in order to help a bunch of boys stage an informal baseball game on a vacant lot, you probably would wonder irritably just what that copper thought the city was paying him for.

On second thought, however, you might feel differently. For if a cop's chief job is to prevent crime, the officer who teaches the youngsters in his district to look up to him as a friend and counsellor is doing a very efficient and praise-worthy job of crime prevention.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief G-man, touched on this point the other day in a speech before the annual convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, at Baltimore.

SUPPOSE, said Mr. Hoover, that a $100,000 bank robbery occurs in a given city. Every youngster in town is, to a certain degree, stirred by the excitement and the adventure of the affair. In a great many cases he will conclude that the robbery has done a brave and romantic thing and is a person to be emulated. In other words, he makes a hero of him.

But if the police have means of contact with the city's youth—through police athletic associations, police play officers, police instructors and umpires for sandlot athletic contests, and so on—then the police have a fine chance to make youth see the robber, not as a hero but as a sap.

"You simply cannot combat in the literal mind of youth the fact that someone got $100,000," said Mr. Hoover. "He can listen to platitudes forever, but the thought remains in his mind—a man robbed a bank and a man got $100,000 and certainly in this instance crime must have been made to pay. And so our job as the guardians of youth is to say why and how that $100,000 is worthless.

"The boy must be made to understand that the money can be spent for no sensible purpose. He must be shown that this sum will be split among dozens of persons whom the robber must pay for aiding his escape.

"He can be convinced that every cent of this money for which a man has dared his life and the penitentiary must either be expended for things which do him not one particle of good or be paid out in a desperate effort to defeat the law, leaving him in the end penniless, a broken being living in a filthy, worm-eaten, rocking house of crime and robbed of everything worth-while which a life of decency might have given him."

THAT, as Mr. Hoover says, is a job well worth doing. It is a job the police can do easily enough, if they have the contacts with youth that enable them to get their message across. Such contacts, obtained through a systematic campaign of friendship and understanding, could be invaluable in the great work of crime-prevention.

The average criminal starts out as a juvenile cop-hater. If that trend can be reversed, a great step in law-enforcement can be taken.

The Safest Ride

RAILROAD passenger traffic has been coming back in the last few years. Part of this is due to lower fares and part of it to the new equipment and faster schedules which the railroads have been adopting. But a good share must be attributed to the fact that travel by train is by far the safest form of travel in existence.

As a sample, consider this fact: during the first six months of 1937, not one passenger on any railroad in the United States lost his life in a train accident. Impressive as that record is, it becomes even more so when you realize that the railroads carried nearly 247,000,000 passengers in that time.

Neither air traffic nor auto traffic can present comparable figures. Such a safety record speaks volumes for the efficiency of modern railroad operation—and is an excellent indication that the railroads will continue to be our greatest mass transportation agency.

The Family Doctor

Inhaling Fine Metal Dust May Give Rise to Painful Symptoms

This is the last of a series of articles in which Dr. Morris Fishben discusses industrial diseases and ways in which the worker's health may be safeguarded.

(No. 359)

Workers in foundries where brass is made and zinc is smelted sometimes develop symptoms of diseases which are known to them by common trade names as brass ague, spelter shakes, and brass chills, and which are also known as metal fume fever.

The metals most commonly concerned are lead, zinc, galvanized iron, and similar substances.

In a typical case resulting from contact with brass and zinc, the worker begins to feel ill after he has been exposed to the fumes for a few hours. Quite frequently the attack first comes on him when he has reached home after working all day.

He feels a chill coming on, his throat gets dry, he coughs and has a feeling of oppression. If the man will take warm bath immediately on reaching home, he may avoid the chill.

In a typical chill the whole body begins to shake. After the chill there is sweating and prostration, and the temperature may reach as much as 101 degrees F. If the man who has had "fume fever" goes back to work he may not have another attack immedately but may get one later when the same combination of circumstances develops again.

The cause of metal fume fever is always the inhalation of finely divided particles of various substances like zinc oxide, magnesium oxide, etc. Apparently the reaction is a protein reaction resulting from the absorption of fumes from the lung. Workers who have been exposed time and again seem to develop a sort of resistance to the condition.

Metal fume fever may be prevented by the use of exhausts and by the use of dust respirators. Since few workers are constantly exposed to such fumes, it is easy to determine the circumstances under which the exposure most frequently occurs. Usually the inhalation of the fumes occurs during the pouring of melted metal or during a welding process.

"Just drive," Jill told the bewildered cab driver, adding as she turned to the young man, "there's a string of hotels around this section—on Park Avenue, on Lexington."

"I'm not looking for a hotel, but a more permanent place to park." The driver concentrated on going nowhere, dashing recklessly in and out of traffic in a manner that left no doubt that the age of miracles had not passed. Besides maneuvering expertly, he was ruminating about a queer world. Plain goofy, these young people.

Jill was also thinking about a queer world. Queer and wonderful.

Here she was sitting in a taxi with a young man whose image she had carried with her for thousands of miles. An engrossed and very handsome young man. "I am wondering why a brass band didn't meet you," the young man spoke, suddenly.

Jill smiled. "I don't like brass bands. But I do like families. It's really my fault that nobody met me. I think I wrote that I'd be saying hello to Lady Liberty when our ship went by her, if I didn't change my mind. And then I didn't change my mind or not. You wouldn't call that being very definite, would you?"

"Not very. It's nice that you have a family at home waiting to welcome you."

Jill thought there was a rather wistful sound to his voice.

She spoke impulsively. "Yes. But of course we're not the regular kind of family. You see my father is only my step-father. He had loved my mother before she married first time. And after her husband—(my father) died, then dad married mother. He's been exactly like a real father to Jack—my brother—and to me, too. And to Barry, also. All of us took the Wentworth name."

"Who is Barry?" "I suppose he's a sort of step-step brother. You see, after mother died, dad married again. Another widow, with a son—Barry—who is just a little younger than Jack. We're rather mixed up, aren't we? Now about you?"

"I came over on the same ship. Tourist," the young man replied simply. "It's much cheaper. After a summer of travel, there wasn't much left. But I had been cooped up so long, I had to move about, if I starved afterward."

"Cooped up?" "In a studio in Paris. And before that—"

"Before that?" Jill prompted. "Oxford, the Sorbonne, the Beaux Arts."

"Oh! There was a world of respect in Jill's exclamation. "There were some places I'd always wanted to paint. So I went off and painted them. I had a practical purpose back of it all, of course."

If Miss Benedict were here now, Jill thought, I'd strangle her. She had prevented her meeting the young artist abroad.

"And now," the young man concluded, "I'm here."

His voice carried. "You want out here, sir?" the driver called back.

"Just as well here as anywhere," the young man replied. "Drop me off at the next corner by that subway entrance."

At the next corner! Why, that meant he was dropping out of her life. That meant she would never know where this amazing young man would stay. And she wanted to know!

day to take their chance at joining the ranks of literature's immortals.

"The Loving Heart," a late book for older girls by Elsie Sangmaster (Houghton Mifflin: $2), takes the story of Berry Pontifrac through four years of trial and romance, to a very satisfactory denouement the day the Confederate army under Lee retreated from Gettysburg.

Berry lives with Granny on a farm over Oak Ridge, above Gettysburg. Her kindness, goodness and energy in keeping the wolf from the door, and herself and her grandmother alive, endear her to everyone, including Thaddeus Stevens, the great liberal, and the McVaines, rich family of the town.

Eventually, however, Berry and Granny have to go to the Poor House, whence old Peter, a neighbor, has preceded them. James, whom Berry loves, marries Caroline; Melissa, a visitor, complicates matters by her southern sympathies. Berry leaves her work at the Country Home to keep house for James' mother.

Good workmanship, this book, well documented as to facts. The author knows her state, its people and history, as few others can boast. A native of Gettysburg, the author has the complete story of those three days, one of the great battles of the world, at her finger tips. The courage and destruction as told in the book, including Baby Frank's escape from a cannon ball, will open the eyes of young readers to the meaning of war, the price paid for our Union.

Berry's character and her discovery that one can be happy in a real world rather than one of the wishful thinking, will be good for growing girls.

E. Nesbit has written another book, for those who have read "The Bastable Children" know this news. In "Wet Magic" (Coward-McCann: $2), four children rescue a mermaid from a circus and are taken, in tanks, to the kingdoms of the water-people at the bottom of the sea. There, Kathleen, innocently starts a war. The children find themselves combatants in a great battle, and are captured by the enemy. They finally, however, restore the lost Mer-King to his people, a little land-boy, to his rightful land-parents, peace to both kingdoms so that the Princess can marry her Prince, and are at last returned high and dry to their own home.

E. Nesbit's stories are exciting, her magic comprehensive and her manner of writing completely charming. There is no age limit here.

9c GOVERNMENT COTTON LOAN FORMS RECEIVED

Forms for effecting government 9-cent loans are here, and we are now prepared to arrange loans with the same prompt and careful consideration that we have extended the producer for over 30 years. The evidence of this constructive and gratifying service is the retention of the valuable patronage of some of the largest and most influential planters in the Hope territory for that unusual length of time; and those who anticipate placing their cotton in 9-cent government loans can be assured of this most satisfactory attention. Furthermore, they will find it to their decided advantage to arrange their loans through our firm.

They Spread the Gloom Out of Buckets "Tom Sawyer"

HOLLYWOOD.—If you like spelldog you'd like the set they have built for "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer." Spelldog is that branch of geology devoted to the exploration of caves. No claustrophobes need apply, for the movie caves constructed at David Selznick's studio seem almost as forbidding and heavily aggressive as the real thing, especially when fall breezes blow dust over everything and voices echo hollowly under the big black canopy that covers the labyrinth.

At first it was planned to film the sequences in the original cave near Hannibal, Mo., but it turned out to look like an oversized gopher hole and was by no means picturesque enough. The outer locale was disappointing, too, with too many signboards and telephone wires. So the studio improved on Mark Twain, as it has had to do several times with the story itself because of its fair for understatement. Understatement is fine for stories but gets you nowhere at all in the visual arts.

So photographers were sent to the Carlsbad Caverns for photographic data on a really picturesque cave. Some of the scenes were reproduced on the Selznick lot, even to the stalactites and stalagmites. All this lent itself to a nice piece of symbolism, for the picture is being done in Technicolor.

When the happy picnic party is shown pain and suffering for our precious ones. Say to yourself, "Few cases of illness are fatal," and stop jumping at conclusions.

Must Face Facts "As for suffering, there has to be a certain philosophy about this. You must learn not to go to pieces when a child is ill or hurt. Every child with few exceptions must experience a share of it. Some more than others, we must admit, but this alone should make us thankful if your own children are more fortunate.

"Prevention is the best cure, but when that fails, as it often will, then why not accept the inevitable with hope and cheerfulness? There is a strange sympathetic tie between mother and child, and I know that a mother's fears transmit themselves to the sick one. To be matter-of-fact and sensible is best. Learn to face whatever comes. Wash your mind of black visions."

"I can't," she sighed. "I can't do it." "All mothers feel that they can't. But they have not tried. They can change their thoughts and stop borrowing trouble, with a mighty effort. It can be done with time and perseverance. To fight self is the hardest task in the world; we have to face self to do it.

at the entrance to the cave, all the colors are bright and cheerful. When the kids become lost, the cave becomes not only darker but menacingly drab, between takes the painters went around with their buckets of gloom (gray paint) and blotted out the gay colors, except for a short space around the exit from which the youngsters eventually escape. This is colorful and well lighted—happy days.

The boys now are working on the island sequence too, and they're having a circus playing pirate between shots. Also they do a lot of singing, mostly "Anchors Aweigh." Alas they have to go to school. Tom Sawyer (Tommy Kelly) is a good student, right enough. But so is Huck Finn (Jackie Moran), who's even studying Latin.

When Tom and Huck finished their graveyard scene the one with the dead cat for curing warts, they begged the stuffed cat from the prop department and sent it over to Carole Lombard, who was working on the next stage in "Nothing Sacred."

Well-Heeled Leonard Penn, Metro actor, appeared on the "Four Marys" set the other day wearing a diamond-studded watch, a chain with a diamond in each link, and carrying a cigarette case with his initials in diamonds. All these were gifts from his wife, Gladys George.

Asked if he were afraid of being held up, Penn said no and opened his make-up box. There among the powder puffs and brushes and rouge pots nestled a revolver. He also keeps a revolver in his car. Penn has been deputized and acts as his wife's bodyguard, which accounts for the artillery. Neither gun is diamond-studded.

Costly Errors "Tovarich," the Claudette Colbert-Charles Boyer picture, has cost well over $1,500,000 to date and still is going strong. One reason it's going strong is that costly retakes are being made to correct minor flaws.

In one scene, filmed a couple of months ago, Miss Colbert entered a kitchen wearing a $200 gown and carrying a beautiful red coat. Director Litvak okayed the shots, but Miss Colbert, when she saw the rushes, insisted on retakes. She decided that instead of carrying the coat she must wear it. This one whim required an expenditure of at least $5000.

During the retake the other day, as Miss Colbert swept into the room, one of the players exclaimed, "What a beautiful gown! Where did you get it?"

And the actress, playing the part of a Russian expatriate in Paris, blurted out the name of a Los Angeles department store. Even the aloof Mr. Boyer

Accused of Taking Big 10-Ton Shovel

Batesville Court Will Hear Charge of Monstrous Theft

BATESVILLE, Ark.—There is not likely to be very much physical evidence presented when these two cases come to trial here next week before Circuit Judge S. M. Bone:

Bill Turush, 23, of East Cushman, on Polk layout, was arrested Wednesday on a charge of stealing a 10-ton steam shovel.

Lennie Bales, 27, of near Batesville, was arrested on a grand larceny charge. He is alleged to have stolen a railroad track from an abandoned short line at the Stark Spring manganese mines near Cushman.

Both alleged thefts were made in peace-meal fashion, with a blow torch used to "tear off" pieces of the stolen goods. The steam shovel and the railroad track were sold to a Batesville junk dealer for scrap iron, it is charged.

The steam shovel, which was used many years ago in the Cushman manganese mines, started "losing weight" early last spring.

The abandoned line began to "shrink" along about the same time. Both men were released on $500 bond each. Both denied any knowledge of the thefts.

Present airliner designs show changed performance characteristics marked by increased speeds and sizes, which has resulted in needs for longer runways for takeoffs and landings.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Aviation records mean dollars. The value of airplane exports is not mere coincidence that during the past two years, when American exports dominated the field in breaking flights, American technical exports reached an all-time high.

It is necessary that airplane be so mounted that transfer of vibration to the ship is prevented as much as such impulses not only cause fatigue and lowered efficiency of the crew, but also discomfort to passengers, and shortens the life of the craft's service.

There is always a feeling of pleasure that the changing times have left untouched the Bay View Reading club, one of the oldest and most pleasant clubs in the city. The personnel of the membership has changed, but the spirit and purpose of the group remain the same, and it certainly must be very pleasing to the founders to know how well they built in their early efforts, and how faithfully their ideals have been carried on. died, in 1926, he had been almost forgotten.

But psychology advanced rather than retreated. Hundreds of students of Freud, Adler and Jung began practicing their teachings, setting up havens for the unhappy and maladjusted. Freud's "unconscious," Adler's "inferiority complex," and Jung's "introvert and extrovert" became part of the language, used all too often, it is true, by people with only very shadowy ideas of what they meant.

Freud himself was displeased by the two-rapid spread of his doctrines, warning repeatedly against the quick analyst because an analysis is "a major surgical operation without an anesthetic."

Will React to Pattern

Perhaps the next popular sensation among the happiness-seekers was Dr. John B. Watson and "Behaviorism." Watson, a scientist connected with Chicago and Johns Hopkins universities, conducted experiments that led him to believe that "man is born a squirming mass without instincts." That if you catch this mass young enough, you can "condition" it so that it will react later according to any pattern you wish. Talents, tastes, fears and phobias are not native to children, Watson taught, they are created by surrounding conditions.

Thus, people implied, by properly "conditioning" a child, there was no reason why he should not grow to a happy, fearless, able nautically 34 happy, fearless, talented and altogether admirable individual. But Watson offered hope for the adult, also.

"To try to uncondition yourself," he said, "is as impossible as trying to pull yourself up by your bootstraps. But if we could establish large reconditioning plants where all the stimuli were determined for a person by the psychologists in charge, we could start the reconditioning with the simple unconditional reflex."

"In a place where it would be determined for a person not only how his thoughts and emotions would be stimulated, but whether he was to have food or not to have it, to have sex or not to have it, there might be some hope for rebuilding the adult in the same manner as we have shown we can take the new-born child and practically determine what manner of man he shall be."

Because he classed psychoanalysis as "voodooism," and the Freudian teachings as "elaborate junk," and also because he accepted a chance to apply his psychological knowledge to advertising, Watson was roundly condemned by most of the other happiness purveyors. His concepts are almost directly a contradiction of Freud.

The Behaviorist wave had largely subsided by 1930, but like all the rest of the guideposts on the road to happiness, it still exerts a definite influence on the direction of the route by which men seek it today.

From these pioneer psychologists are derived the standard psychological and aptitude tests which are generally accepted in schools and industry, and which are aimed at making people happier by finding out their abilities and characteristics and giving them work or surroundings which will be in harmony with them.

Such tests and examinations, constantly modified in the light of experience, have occupied a constantly-increasing place in daily life ever since the World War, when for the first time great masses of men were subjected to elementary tests.

Coach Says Grid Talks Is Passe

Bernie Moore Declares Method of Playing on Emotion Is Bunk

BATON ROUGE, La.—(AP)—Bernie Moore said Wednesday the method of playing on football player's emotions is bunk.

"That's the bunk these days," Bernie declared through cigarette smoke in his modern, airy office at Louisiana State.

He sat back in his swivel chair surrounded by electric buttons and volumes of biography.

"If your team is better grounded fundamentally you'll win ball games," he said. "If it isn't, you're going to get beat."

But still the thought persisted that Moore must inspire his men. Back in 1933, he first gained fame as coach of the LSU track team. The national intercollegiate track and field championship went to his handful of en-

Tennessee Adopts County Unit Plan

Boss Crump's Shelby County (Memphis) Machine Is Clipped

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(AP)—A county unit system of nominating candidates for governor, United States senator and public utilities commissioner will replace the present direct vote plan in Tennessee, effective with next year's state-wide primaries.

The house completed legislative action Wednesday on Governor Gordon Browning's program that will have the effect of clipping the power of Shelby county (Memphis). Senate approval was given last week. Browning and E. H. Crump, leader of the dominant Shelby political organization, recently severed their alliance and engaged in an exchange of bitter statements.

United States Senator K. D. McKel-ler said the governor sponsored the unit plan in an effort to beat him for the senate in 1940.

Under the unit plan, a county is entitled to one vote for each 100 votes or fraction thereof it cast in the previous year's election for governor, but the unit votes cannot exceed one-eighth of one per cent of its population.

Duke and Duchess Coming to U. S.

Society in Washington Preparing for Visit in November

By SIGRID ARNE
AP Feature Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Behind closed doors here there's some very vehement fingering being going on because 15 years ago the finger-nail-biters were ignoring two ladies they very much wish they hadn't.

One is the Duchess of Windsor, and the other is her aunt, Mrs. Buchanan "Aunt Bessie" Merryman.

Fifteen years ago the Duchess was just part of Washington's social fringe; a pretty, brown-haired, young woman whose husband, a naval officer, had left her. She was invited around some on the gold-coast but mostly because her second-cousin was the wealthy Mrs. George Barnett, wife of the one-time commandant of the marine corps.

The Duchess's aunt, Mrs. Merryman, has always "lived a very quiet life." She still keeps a small five-room apartment on a side street.

And so now the Duke and the Duchess of Windsor are coming to America. To Baltimore, Washington and Virginia where once the Duchess had some hard social shelling.

Embassy Plans Watched

The really big question of the day is, "What will the British Embassy do?"

In Washington lingo that means, "Will the British Ambassador Sir Ronald Lindsay, and his wife, Lady Lindsay (one of the Oyster Bay Hoyts) invite the Windsors to the embassy. It is understood the embassy must wait for a "Go ahead" signal from London. But if the signal comes, the affair will be as royal as anything at Buckingham. The embassy is a huge and austere building, and Lady Lindsay can take her royalty or leave it.

If the Embassy entertains, the social flood-gates will swing wide-open. Other embassies will dust off their footman and light up like birthday cakes.

Here and there a hostess with a large enough house and gilt-edged social standing will turn up in the line of people sending out engraved invitations to meet "Their Royal Highnesses, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor."

And, of course, there will be the official entertaining by government heads, and the parties by members of the Duchess's family.

Her family is led off socially by

Little Fellows in the Market Anew

Draw on Bank Savings to Protect Margins and Grab Bargains

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The stock market swung into another brisk rally Thursday, active shares rising as much as $2, but liberal cashing of profits pared the gains, and turned some into losses.

The "Little Fellow"

NEW YORK.—(AP)—The New York Post said Wednesday that the "little fellows" who buy securities in odd-lots withdrew substantial amounts of their savings yesterday and today to protect margin accounts, and also to pick up "what they believe to be bargains in securities."

The Post said it was informed by savings banks throughout the city that declines in deposits, ranging from 25 to 50 per cent above normal, were directly traceable to the break in stocks culminating in drastic declines Monday and Tuesday of this week. Total withdrawals of the past few days were estimated at "considerably above $250,000,000."

The major portion of the cash went into Wall Street, said the Post, adding: "Several banks reported they had made out checks directly to stock exchange firms; others declared the demand for cash in large denominations indicated that stock operators were the cause for withdrawals."

Mrs. Barnett who gave the Young Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, her coming-out party. And it is at her Virginia estate, Wakefield Manor, 40 miles south of Washington, that the Windsors are expected to visit.

The White House is expected to lead off the official entertaining—if any. Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, is expected to follow. While next in line would be Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the assistant secretary of state.

And could it be that the modest, one-time school teacher who is now wife of John L. Lewis, the labor leader, may play hostess to the pair? Her white Colonial home filled with fine antiques should certainly be adequate setting for the meeting of Windsor and Lewis. And Windsor has announced he wants to meet Lewis.

One other question that is keeping Washington hostesses chilly is: Will the Duke, who says he is coming here to study housing and labor conditions, turn "thumbs down" on all parties?

trants, including the great Jack Torrance and Glen Hardin. But a little fellow named Matt Gordy really won the title by jumping 14 feet in the pole vault—six inches higher than he ever vaulted before.

Then, the LSU gridders played a game against Texas two weeks ago that seemed surely inspired.

"No," said Moore, "that's not inspiration, at least not from any effort on my part. The boys remembered Texas tied us last year and probably kept LSU from an unqualified invitation to the Rose Bowl. Nothing I could have done would have caused the team to come up as high as they did for Texas."

Moore said he could "only point out what mistakes we're making and suggest remedies." He recommended good material and hard work.

"We fought to the pride of our boys at all times," he said.

Moore fought as a non-commissioned officer in the Argonne and St. Mihiel engagements of the World War. His football doctrine includes lessons in precision he learned in the army.

He is trying now for a third straight Southwestern Conference championship with a team unbeaten, untied and unscored upon so far this season.

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. When is it permissible for two plates to be cleared from the table at a time?
2. Is it correct to serve a dessert with the silver on the plate?
3. When a maid is exchanging a fresh plate for a used one, with which hand should the plate containing the food be placed?
4. If a salad is served with the meat course is it placed at the right or left?
5. Is it correct to fold napkins in a cone shape so that they can stand up?

What would you do if—

You are setting a table for a meal where the first course is to be an oyster cocktail? Place the oyster fork—

- (a) At left of other forks?
- (b) At right of knives and spoons?
- (c) On plate beside cocktail?

Answers

1. When a hostess is serving without a maid.
2. Yes.
3. Left, and right hand used for empty plate.
4. Right, unless a second drink unbalances the cover.
5. No.

Which means: Shift right . . . KICK OUT THAT OLD EQUIPMENT! You gain every time—save energy and get better results with a lot less work. You'll have the whole family cheering and you will score a big hit every time your meals are served if that star performer, A. Modern Gas-range is on the job. Here are four of the many reasons a gas range is better . . .

1. Efficient cooking top: Non-clog burners light instantly automatically, when you turn the valve. Each burner a simmering, medium or fast fire with any number of heats between—and no waiting for any of them.
2. Better oven cooking: Fast, uniform heat distribution. Perfect ventilation. Heats quickly, holds any temperature indefinitely, and shortens baking time. No oven watching or temperature guessing ever necessary.
3. Better broiling: Broiler in a Magic Chef swings out. Does away with tiresome stooping. Broil with door closed—no smoky kitchen nor spattering fats. Quickly removable, wash like a dish. Easy to keep clean.
4. Modern construction: All-steel "Skyscraper" construction, both durable and beautiful. Porcelain enameled, harmonizing colors. Designed and built for efficiency, economy and easy operation to take care of every cooking need.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backaches quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 2 pints a day or about 2 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 million of kidney troubles that out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Paris Has Style Up Its Sleeve

By ROSETTE HARGROVE
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
PARIS—The main characteristic which distinguishes the new intermediary gowns—those smart creatures for dinners at home and in restaurants, for movie first-nights and like occasions where formal gowns are out of place—is the presence of sleeves. These are either short, above or below the elbow, or else frankly long.

And again, fabric and color are factors to be considered. Long sleeves usually appear in the more sumptuous velvet or lame dresses, while black crepe fashions dresses with short sleeves, the whiteness of the arms relieving the somberness of the fabric. Often transparent effects such as net or mousseline sleeves are introduced.

The sleeved evening gown is an offspring of the evening suit which until recently enjoyed such a vogue. Its lines are simple and this year the conventionally tailored jacket is replaced by boleros or capes, or by semi-fitted jackets with revers embroidered in paillettes, jet beads or gold threat motifs.

Hein's stunning dinner gown has a pink velvet bodice with braided motifs in purple to match the purple velvet skirt and a corset belt in bright blue. It's worn with a cape of purple velvet. Note the long sleeves.

Most Designers Stress Bodice. Most of the interest of this category of evening dress is centered in the bodice. Necklines are either high, or else high at the back with deep, square-cut or V-shaped fronts. The bust is stressed with draperies and the waistline usually raised.

The skirt is just above or below ankle length, sometimes shorter in front and cut on slim, modern lines, a slight fullness generally introduced very gradually from well below the hipline.

The leading creators have interpreted the long-sleeved evening dress in a variety of ways. Maggy Rouff shows one in handsome lame in a new black and silver lace design cut on princess lines with generous square front décollete and long, slim sleeves. A new and amusing little velvet neckband in bright velvet ribbon finished with a shirred rosette and a shirred velvet muff complete the picture. Ardanne favors deep red velvet, in the shade which she calls "Black Dahlia," also cut on clinging princess lines. Rosevienne suggests black broche silk crepe for a dress with the top simulating a tunic. The edge of this tunic and the high, clinging collar are underlined with applied stylized leaves in gold kid.

Pink and Purple as Rivals to Black

A Jean Patou model in black crepe has the bodice entirely embroidered in black crystal tubes. The V décollete is placed at the back, extending to the waistline and the front is correspondingly high. A strip of the crystal embroidery is carried down the front of the skirt to the hem, while the edges of the décollete, the band on the skirt and an encrusted band down the front of the bodice are done in diamante for contrast. This model is completed by a wide scarf cape of the plain crepe which can be worn to suit the wearer's moods.

An interesting color combination, as an alternative to black, is suggested by Jacques Heim, in a cape and long-sleeved dress ensemble. The high-necked bodice is in pale pink velvet, with the fulness massed on each shoulder and above the raised waistline under arabesques of purple velvet ribbon to match the long, clinging skirt.

Jean Patou makes this smart coat for town or country of thick soft wool in light beige and finishes it with collar and cuffs of elegant beaver. It's worn over a dark brown jersey suit. The jersey beret has a beaver pompon.

Blevins Coming to Front in Football

Present Squad, Coached by W. O. Epperson, Best in History of School

BLEVINS, Ark. — Blevins High School is rapidly coming to the front among the smaller high schools of Arkansas in the way of developing football teams.

The Blevins team this season, under the coaching of Coach W. O. Epperson, has already won three of its five games, being defeated only by Bauxite in the opening game of the season, and holding a scoreless tie with Gurdon High School.

That game was played at Bauxite before the Blevins school opened its fall term. Only four of the 13 Blevins lettermen played in the game. Since then the Hornets have grown stronger as the season progressed.

The record of the team so far: Blevins 0, Bauxite 24. Blevins 6, Anity 0. Blevins 8, Glenwood 0. Blevins 8, Magnolia 0. Blevins 0, Gurdon 0. The school has recently purchased new red and grey uniforms and is

One College Game in State Friday

University of Arkansas Meets S. M. U. at Fort Smith Saturday

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—An Arkansas State College team, seriously handicapped by injuries, will oppose the Hendrix College Warriors, conquerors of Southwestern University of Memphis, in the state's only college grid game this week.

With four linemen and a fullback unable to play, Coach Leslie Speck made plans to throw freshmen re-

This Friday afternoon, Coach Epperson will send his second-string squad against the Hope High School second-stringers at Blevins. The game will start at 2:30 p. m.

On October 22, Coach Epperson will send his first team against Chidester in a game to be played at Blevins.

The following week, the Hornets take on a "double-header," playing Princeton High School on Wednesday, November 3 at Blevins, and then journeying to Prescott on Friday night, November 5, for a game with the Prescott Curley Wolves.

The balance of the schedule calls for games with Arkadelphia at Blevins, November 13. The Hornets then make a road trip, playing Ashdown at Ashdown on November 19.

Thanksgiving day is open. Coach Epperson is anxious to schedule one of the "larger" schools of the state. Epperson has a team averaging approximately 163 pounds. The line scales 165 and the backfield, 160 pounds.

The Blevins team has a triple-threat back in Coy Nelson. Leo Smith, fullback, is a capable ball toter and one of the best blocking backs Coach Epperson has seen in action this season. Guy Books holds down the quarterback position and is one of the fastest men on the team.

C. F. Goodlett, is a good all-around player. In the line are two standouts in Olin Mouser, 170-pound guard and also one of the fastest men on the squad.

The biggest man on the team is Elton Cummings, 180-pound tackle and captain of the team.

Star Dust

By LEONARD ELLIS

Did you know that Nashville High School football team is "doped" to beat Hope by a score of 56 points? You didn't? Well, here it is: Hope defeated Horatio, 48 to 0. Nashville defeated Dierks, 106 to 0. Dierks then turned around and defeated Horatio, 12 to 10, a team that Hope defeated by a score of 48 to 0.

By process of adding and subtracting, Nashville is favored by 56 points.

Now, look at the other side of "dope" and you will find that Hope has the "dope" in its favor over Nashville by 47 points. Here it is: Camden defeated Smackover, 19 to 0. Hope defeated Smackover, 20 to 0. This gives Hope a one-point advantage over Camden.

Camden defeated Nashville, 52 to 6. Add the one point to Camden's total of 52 and then subtract 6 and you will have the "dope" favoring Hope by 47 points.

Here's an opportunity for every member of the Bobcat line to get a nice juicy steak with French fried potatoes. One of these steaks is waiting for every member of the Bobcat line that blocks a punt in the Nashville game.

The steaks are at Southern Cafe, operated by "Iky" Pritchard and Luther Reynerson. "Iky," however, added that if a Hope lineman happened to block two punts, the player wouldn't have to eat the second stew.

Up at Blytheville they're talking about getting Ben Epstein of the Arkansas Gazette to "cover" the Hope-Blytheville game at Blytheville November 5.

I get this information from a sports column conducted by J. P. Friend in the Blytheville Courier News.

All of this reminds me of another town that wanted some statewide publicity about a year ago. Fans of that town arranged for Epstein to be there. "But it was a sad mistake for the fans—because the Bobcats 'poured' it on, 31 to 6. It happened at Nashville. Remember?

Anyway, Mr. Friend does have a nice word for Vasco Bright, Hope's quarterback: We quote: "Coach Foy Hammons of Hope is praising his backfield star, Vasco Bright. Joe Craig, who scouted the Hope-Jonesboro game, says Bright is 50 per cent better than Duckworth, the North Little Rock star ball-carrier. "That's a lot percentage! Save your pennies for that classic November 5 at Blytheville, it'll be worth seeing."

And too, Mr. Friend, we'll be seeing you about November 5 if we can save enough pennies to get there!

And now for some pickskin picks! Out of 10 selections last week we had only two to backfire on us. We made the wrong horse when we picked Forrest City to beat Brinkley—and Fordyce to beat Malvern.

Brinkley and Malvern turned the tables on us and came through with victories. Here goes:

Nashville at Hope. Hope 28, Nashville 0.
El Dorado at Pine Bluff. Pine Bluff 19, El Dorado 0.
Fordyce at Hot Springs. Hot Springs 20, Fordyce 6.
Little Rock at Fort Smith. Little Rock 27, Fort Smith 6.
Blytheville at Walnut Ridge. Blytheville 13, Walnut Ridge 6.
Benton vs. Catholic High at Little Rock. Catholic High 12, Benton 0.
North Little Rock at Searcy. North Little Rock 20, Searcy 0.
Paragould at Forrest City. Forrest City 7, Paragould 6.
Newport at Jonesboro. Jonesboro 19, Newport 6.
Paris at Russellville. Russellville 26, Paris 12.
Camden at Texarkana. Camden 32, Texarkana 0.

Ripley Attraction at Fair

Maurice, the Ossified Man, is one of the freak attractions at the Merchants & Farmers Fair. Maurice was born in Lucas county, Iowa, 44 years ago. At the age of 10 he commenced to slowly turn to stone. Doctors and specialists are mystified as to the cause of his condition. He is under the constant care of a nurse and travels about the country in a large show truck. He is said to be one of the few ossified persons living and was at one time featured in one of Ripley's "Believe-It-Or-Not" exhibits. Doctors are invited to visit this exhibit free and make a complete examination of Maurice.

El Dorado Points for Zebra Contest

Wildcats to Be in Top Shape for Game at Pine Bluff

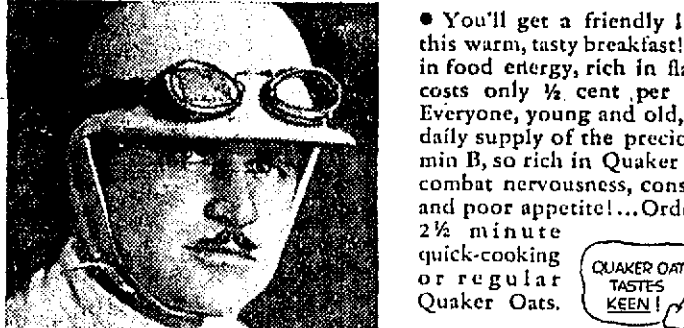

LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The El Dorado Wildcats are pointing for the undefeated and untied Pine Bluff Zebras when they clash in the feature game on the state high school conference card this week.

Coach Skipper Hays of the Cats said the El Dorado first team will be ready for action for the first time in three weeks. Five of the six regulars, ailing when the team lost last week's 7-0 decision to Smackover, are in good shape. A knee injury will hamper the play of End "Cotton" Sims.

Anyhow, Mr. Friend does have a nice word for Vasco Bright, Hope's quarterback: We quote: "Coach Foy Hammons of Hope is praising his backfield star, Vasco Bright. Joe Craig, who scouted the Hope-Jonesboro game, says Bright is 50 per cent better than Duckworth, the North Little Rock star ball-carrier. "That's a lot percentage! Mountaineer Saw Crash of Airliner

Started for Civilization With News—Rescue Party Beats Him

SALT LAKE CITY.—(P)—A mountaineer—only eye-witness to America's worst airplane disaster—told a vivid story Wednesday of a transport pilot flying blindly through a mountain blizzard, then a terrible crash which killed 19 persons.

Height Profit, trapper from Northeastern Utah's trackless wilderness said he saw the United Airlines passenger "Mainliner" barely 100 feet towering pines in his backyard, one day night, watched the craft's lights vanish in the storm, then heard it plough into a granite ridge.

Nashville. Forrest City pairs off with Earagould, Jonesboro plays Newport, Russellville meets Paris, and Clarksville entertains Rogers. Camden journeys to Texarkana for a Saturday game.

Profit's crude pine-board cabin, near Humpy creek in the Uinta mountains, 15 miles south of the Chogayna Salt Lake City air line.

Sunday night Profit heard the hum of airplane motors, saw the sleek airliner battling a blizzard and a few minutes later heard it thud into a snow-drifted mountain peak. He hurried through the night toward the head of Humpy canyon, and there lay the bodies of 15 men and four women, scattered about the battered wreckage of the elaborate transport.

Profit headed for civilization to report his find, but by the time he reached the nearest ranch, approximately 15 miles away, searching parties had located the wreckage and ground parties were en route to the scene.
